Objective of the Programme:-

Research ethics involves the application of fundamental ethical principles to research activities which include the design and implementation of research, respect towards society and others, the use of resources and research outputs, scientific misconduct and the regulation of research. There are several reasons why it is important to adhere to ethical norms in research. First, norms promote the aims of research, such as knowledge, truth, and avoidance of error. For example, prohibitions against fabricating, falsifying, or misrepresenting research data promote the truth and minimize error.

Route Map:-

College:-

Topics covered:-

- Data fabrication and falsification. Data fabrication means the researcher did not actually do the study, but made-up data.
- Plagiarism.
- Multiple submissions.
- Redundant publications
- COPE.
- ICMJE.
- Plagiarism detection

Outcome of the Programme:-

An author must be aware of good publication practices. While refraining from scientific misconduct or research frauds, authors should adhere to Good Publication Practices (GPP). Publications which draw conclusions from manipulated or fabricated data could prove detrimental to society and health care research. The formal component of the scholarly communication system, that is to say the publication of an article in a peer reviewed learned journal, serves many purposes outside of simple communication.
